DETOURS TO BE DONE AWAY WITH

Corrugated Iron Pipe Is to Be Used Thus Doing Away with Long Detours.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 3 (AP) The detour, one of the motorists pet bugbears, may be avoided in Kentucky in a good many cases where it was formerly common to close the road to make a certain type of repairs, Joe S. Boggs, the state highway engineer said.

This applies to cases where small bridges or culvert installations are being made, he said, either because of failure of existing structures or because additional drainage has been found necessary.

"Instead of tearing up the roadway to replace failed culverts, highway engineers are now using sections of corrugated iron pipe which they simply slip inside the failed structure, and pour concrete or ram earth into the space between the pipe and the old culvert," he said.

"The result is a perfectly sound culvert, installed at far less cost than the previous structure and without any disturbance to tarffic.

In cases where a new culvert is to be installed, instead of tearing up the road surface and digging a trench, the same long sections of corrugated pipe are jacked and tunneled into position without digging the usual trench, he said.

NEGRO CONVICT HELD IN LEE COUNTY JAIL

Mob Violence Threatened Saturday Night at Convict Camp.

MAKES ANALYSIS

State Chemist Will Make Examination of Blood on Spencer's Clothing and That of Murdered Child.

JONESVILLE, Va., Nov. 3. — William Spencer, colored convict in the road camp seven miles south west of this place who is suspicioned of the murder of Maxie Kinser, the thirteen year old daughter of Harvey Kinser of that neighborhood, was removed to the county jail here, esterday evening by order of the superintendent of the State Penitentiary, by C. D. Fugate, superintendent of road construction in whose charge the negro was at the time the crime was committed.

The situation in the vicinity of the camp, that at one time threatened mob violence simmered down Sunday and the tense situation has abated. A number gathered in the vicinity of the camp Saturday night and for a time patrolled the road Mr. Fugate frankly told the leaders of the gathering that he was far from convinced that the negro was guilty and even if he were, he should have protection and a fair trial After lingering in the vicinity of the camp until three o'clock Sunday morning, the rioters discharged a number of shots and left the vicinity.

The child was killed about eight o'clock Oct. 31. Her father had gone after a load of coal and her mother went to a neighbors to do washing. A brother of the girl was at the home. It is stated that this boy has been seen since the murder.

Spencer, it is said, went to the Kinser home to take back a pan that Mrs. Kinser had used in cooking a 'possum for some of the convicts, Spencer among the number.

The negro rode to a point just in front of the Kinser home, where he was dropped and picked up a short time afterwards when the truck returned after dumping a load of crushed rock. Spencer states that he set the pan down on a stump in front of the Kinser house and returned to the road to await the coming of the truck. He was there when the truck driver arrived on the backtrip. Nothing unusual was noted about his appearance and a careful examination after the disclosure of the murder did not fix any evidence of crime outside of a few blood marks on one leg of his trousers. Spencer, helped clean the 'possum that Mrs. Kinser afterwards cooked, and claimed that the blood found on his leg was possum blood. This part of his clothing and a part of the blood stained clothing of the murdered child have been sent to the state chemist for analysis. Pending his report, no charge has been lodged against the negro.

Officials in close touch with the situation are of the opinion that the negro did not perpetrate the crime. They are of the opinion that had Spencer murdered the girl, he would have made an attempt to get away and would not have returned to the camp

SOUTH DAKOTA TO DEDICATE BRIDGES

A Large Official Gtahering to Dedicate Series of Five Bridges Over Missouri.

MOBRIDGE, S. D., Nov. 3. (AP) —All South Dakota will face toward this city in tribute November 12th when in the presence of a large official gathering the state will dedicate the first of a history-making series of five bridges over the Missouri river. The entire quintet of structures is scheduled for completion by the close of next year—just two years after the start.

The bridges will redeem the western half of the state from a condition of practical isolation during a large part of the year. Heretofore there has not been a single highway bridge cross the Missouri river over its course through the state.

Enthusiasm for the project bror rapid construction far surpassing original plans. The first step was taken in 1921 when a one mill bridge tax was levied "for bridge construction and maintenance." Two years later the project assumed definite form when proceeds of the one mill tax were diverted into a special fund to build five bridges.

Then, instead of waiting for the fund to accumulate, counties and cities over the state took advantage of a legislative provision and by issuing bonds and warrants subscribed amounts sufficient to place the whole project under way as rapidly as the plans could be formed and contracts let.

The bridges have a combined length of more than a mile and a half and will cotnain a total of 26 spans and 31 piers, the deepest of which was sunk into bed rock 60 feet beneath the surface of the water.

Shall Constitutional Law Be Upheld and Enforced?

Jurists are warning us of a threatened breakdown of law in America. The columns of the press are daily reminders that America is the home of a great mass of men and women who are a law unto themselves and who do not even pretend to respect the laws of the land except when it pleases them.

While this condition shows up in many ways, unquestionably the most dangerous way in which it has been manifested in recent years is in the revolt of certain classes against the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. One of the parties to this revolt whose behaviour is the most discouraging and discreditable is the supposed respectable citizen who to gratify his thirst for drink foregatchers with the bootleggers and gives his encouragement to that class of demagogue politician that represents lawlessness when it believes the lawless have enough votes.

We are approaching an election in Kentucky. Senator A. O. Stanley, who is a candidate for re-election, has very frankly and openly allied himself with the lawless liquor element. Senator Stanley is a candidate on the Democratic ticket. We have some words to say here on the question of the fitness of his re-election. Both the editor and business manager of the Western Recorder have all their lives voted the democratic tickt. We are utterly without any personal bias and consideration in the present election, and our interest in this issue has no relation to partisan politics. If we had any interest personally it would be to save from discredit the party whose fair name for achievement, and statesmanship is now being jeopardized by Senator Stanley's championship of liquor and lawlessness.

At Elkton, Kentucky, on October 13, 1924, Senator Stanley said, as quoted in a press dispatch: "Yes, I voted against the Volstead Act and would do it again and I have no apology to make for it."

The Lexington Leader, of April 23, 1923, had the following concerning a speech of Senator Stanley before the Knights of Columbus at Lexington: "Introduced to a large audience of Knights of Columbus and their friends as the champion of personal rights, Senator A. O. Stanley, Sunday night at a banquet at the Phoenix Hotel, asserted his hostility to interference with the religious, political and personal rights of individuals. Using his theme 'Intolerance,' the senior Senator from Kentucky made a reply to the charge that he was 'reactionary and wet.' He said: 'I wear both charges as badges of honor.'"

That is, Senator Stanley feels that it was an honor to him that he was regarded as reactionary and wet, and that he was the father of a bill in the United States Senate calculated to prevent the enforcement of the Volstead Act.

In the Congressional Record of September 23, 1921, on page 5,788, Senator Stanley is reported as asking unanimous consent in the Senate to have incorporated in the Record a burlesque which he offered on our National Anthem. Standing in his place in the United States Senate, Senator Stanley said: "It is dedicated to the Eighteenth Amendment and reads as follows:

"My country 'tis of thee,
Land of grape juice and tea,
of thee I sing.
Land where we all have tried
To break the law and lied;
From every mountain side
The bootleg springs.

"My native country thee,
Land of home brewrie,
Thy brew I love.
I love thy booze and thrills
And thy illicit stills,
The moonshine runs in rills,

It is unnecessary to make further quotations to demonstrate that Senator Stanley is openly encouraging the breaking down of the Volstead Act and the Prohibition Amendment. Asking the suffrage of God-fearing and patriotic citizens in maintaining the dignity and power of American Constitutional Law, he is avowedly the voice of an anarchistic revolt against the enforcement of that law in the Eighteenth Amendment.

The right of religious journals to espouse the cause of prohibition is not questioned. It comes of prohibition being a moral and welfare question. An even more fundamental issue of public law and order is now added that of whether or not constitutional law shall be respected. This is even deeper and more universal in its reach than prohibition.

If the Eighteenth Amendment is to be sneered at and winked at, and evaded and jeered at by bootleggers, demagogues and unassimilated European immigrants who love American money but have no respect for American institutions—if this kind of thing is given the prestige and sanction that it will get by having as its voice a Senator who supposedly represents the decent and God-fearing people of a great American Commonwealth, we are not alarmist when we declare that we are at the verge of the breakdown of American institutions.

We would enforce this point. The United States Senator holds a position that gives his voice more national prestige and significance than that of any other citizen of his state.

Therefore, to elect a man senator who sneers and laughs at the laws of the land and perpetrates a burlesque of them before the national senate, using for his mockery a patriotic Christian hymn, would be for Kentucky to put the seal of approval on his making a jest and by-word of the law he solemnly swore to enforce.

It will not do to say prohibition is a dead issue. It is a very live issue. There are today thirty-five or more organizations in America banded together for the explicit purpose of destroying the Eighteenth Amendment. Senator Stanley was the invited guest and chief speaker of one of there—the Illinois Division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment—in Chicago in January, 1922. The published report said: "Stanley sounds liberty clarion. Lifting glasses of plain water, five hundred Chicago business men tonight drank 'to beer and wine for all who want it,' and pledged themselves to oppose the Volstead Act."

Radical socialists and bolshevists are blasting at the Constitution from the angle of destroying the supreme court's authority. In what respect is their campaign to destroy American institution more vicious than is the sustained propaganda of Senator Stanley of Kentucky?

Among the things at take in the election of so flagrant an enemy to constitutional law by Kentucky's citizenship is the respect of the public for the righteousness and good citizenship of the evangelical church membership of this state. A large majority of the voters are church members. They sit in the pews on Sunday ad profess to be disciples of the crucified Christ. How can Baptists, Disciples, Methodists and Presbyterians—not to mention others—keep their own respect or claim that of the public if their teachings have not power to keep their members from voting to keep in power and prestige such a voice for lawlessness and potential revolution as Senator A. O. Stanley has abundantly proven himself to be?

We are the keeper of no man's conscience. But we are a responsible newspaper voice for Baptists. We would be unworthy the trust that a great religious body reposes in us if we did not raise our voice in protest against a continuance of the shame which the record of Senator Stanley brings upon every Christian and every patriotic citizen in the great Commonwealth of Kentucky.—Western Recorder.

Did You Ever Stop to Think

By E R Waite, Secretary, Shawnee, Okla., Board of Commerce.

THAT publicity is as necessary in city building as it is in any individual business.

THAT the advantages of a city are its opportunities, and every effort should be made through the printed page to bring these opportunities to the attention of the largest number of people.

THAT no city may expect to get very far on the road of progress as long as a majority of its citizens refuse to co-operate with its civic organizations.

THAT the development of many cities will be retarded just so long as there is a division among its citizens on the things that are so necessary for its development.

THAT a city will grow to the fullness of her opportunities only when all her citizens co-operate in those efforts that are vital for the advancement of the city.

THAT you should make your city known as a city of hospitality. Every one of your citizens should be a booster because your city is one that deserves boosting.

THAT your city always looks forward because she is making a record for progress.

THAT you should tame the home city knockers. One knocker can do more harm to a city in a minute than two good citizens can repair in a month.

WITH A COMMON PURPOSE and united effort to make your city a bigger, brighter and busier city, there is no limit to your city's growth.

HUNT'S DAILY LETTER

BY HARRY B. HUNT
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Washington, The City Beautiful, may once again become a tented city unless a truce is reached between the capital's landlords and tenants.

More than 3000 notices of eviction, effective Nov. 1, have been served by landlords on tenants who have refused to meet rent increases which went into effect Oct. 1.

This threatened wholesale eviction is the culmination of a warfare between renters and landlords that began with our entry into the World War. Congress has never put the brakes on skyrocketing rentals at that time by declaring a housing emergency and providing a rent commission for the District of Columbia with power to regulate rentals.

This commission under the ho District landlords has been continued from year to year by Congress. But recent court decisions adverse to the local rent act and the powers of the commission have given the property owners courage and the flood of dispossess notices is their declaration of war.

THAT it may be an intense and dramatic battle is indicated by the rallying of threatened renters into a "Tenants League" sworn to resist the demands of their landlords to the limit.

Preparatory to the 'zero hour' for battle this organization has applied for permission to erect tents in the ellipse, a large open park space immediately south of the White House for the housing of members who suddenly find themselves and their possessions in the streets.

These grounds were thrown open a year ago, for tents to house thousands of visiting Shriners during the national Shrine convention. Secretary of War Weeks, however, says permission for such use by Shriners was specifically granted by Congress, and that lacking congressional sanction similar use cannot be made of them for the relief of evicted renters. Weeks also says the army will not supply tents, blankets or cots in the landlord-tenant war, as was done at the time of the Shrine conclave.

UNDAUNTED by this, those who are defying eviction are obtaining permission to place tents on vacant sites and are seeking tents and equipment for a long siege.

This situation develops at a time when there is admittedly an adequate supply of apartments and homes in Washington. It is not due to a housing shortage.

It is the price being charged for rental property that has brought the crisis. Tenants declaring they cannot and will not pay higher rents while landlords insist on jacking up rentals to new high levels.

The average price of an apartment room in Washington today, according to rent commission's figures is $35 per month. That makes a three-room apartment cost $105, a five-room suite $175. In the face of these rentals a government clerk trying to raise a family in Washington becomes perforce a financial expert. Otherwise he simply can't "get by."

MEMBERS of the rent commission declare that Washington landlords are agreed in a policy preferring to rent only two-thirds of their apartments at high rentals rather than all at a moderate rate which would produce the same gross return.

In addition to this, the crowding of families of from three to five people into "davinette" and "cabinette" apartments of two or three little rooms is already producing an unwholesome condition socially and physically.

These are the things that have decided tenants on a definite and determined campaign of resistance.

"We'll head it out on this line. If we freeze all winter," is the slogan of the Tenant League battalion.

OPEN FORUM

To the Editor of the Daily News:

If by chance, after reading this you think it worthy of publication, because you, too, think we, the older people of our town have not given the boy a square deal, I should be glad to see it in an early issue.

To the fathers and mothers of the boys and young men who are spending so much of their time right now on the football field I should like to unburden my heart of what I think is due to these boys of yours and mine.

I do not refer alone to the parents of the boys who have been able to make good and belong to one of the two big teams: High School and Midget Elevens. I include every mother and every father of every boy and every girl in our schools.

First, let me tell you what one of our greatest educators has said about football: "Football is the finest training known for the boy in three ways: physically, mentally and morally."

What is the highest ambition of every boy in school and college? Is it to make the highest grades? No, every red-blooded boy and young man would like to be star tackle, or star end, or some other fellow on that first squad in High School or College. What appeals more to that romantic side of every girl than that big husky, manly football player, who is at this season "The Man of the Hour"?

Then if every boy wants to play or does play football, shouldn't we as parents, take a great deal of interest in this game?

Do you know that your boy and mine are doing and learning out there on that field day after day? If you do not, then you should find out. Is this rather blunt? I speak in all fairness and what I say comes from the heart of a mother, who for the cause has suffered, bled and died in mind and heart ever since her boy was old enough to get in the game. Do we know these men who are guiding and directing the lives of our boys, as much as we, as parents, are doing? Do we know what they are teaching these boys?

Is this football game just a game like other games played by the boys of pre-adolescent age? Or is it a game of only brute strength?

I say again that these men are not alone teaching football tactics. They are building character for more than we think. Football teaches more than we think. teaches discipline—both of mind and body—it teaches system co-operation, quickness of mind, and thought, determination and many more qualities that go to make up a real man. Can we as parents make our boys understand the value of foods? The coach can. He says so and so, you must not eat, and others you must, in order that you will have the required strength and weight?

What about cigarettes? Will they stop smoking because it is wrong or because they will injure their health?

No boy during the football season can smoke cigarettes because it weakens him and he will be unfit for the game. Boys have been injured in games just because they had not kept the law.

Youth does not understand right and wrong it does not appeal to them, but they do know that to break the laws of nature, God's own laws will make them unfit to take part in the greatest of all pleasures to them.

The sooner we parents realize that the spiritual natures of our adolescent boys and girls can be reached and developed, only thru the physical, the sooner we will take more interest in all of their clean, healthy activities.

Then, what parent is able to make his or her boy, who is not a student understand that hours wasted in school mean of this day and generation more than ever before, taking a mediocre place in the world in after years?

In their own language: being on the scrub team. Though a boy may be the star player, if he does not come up with the required grades, he cannot play.

Now, if these things are true and you know they are, I ask in all fairness, are we treating him fair when we do not do the least we can to encourage him—attend the games? If we are so fortunate as to be the father or mother of one of the elect should our business be more important than our boy's happiness? or should we mothers be too tired, too busy or too worried to see that boy of ours trying to do his very best for his team and school. I tell you he can do better when he sees your face on the side-line.

Those of you who do not enjoy that distinction will find it far more interesting—and exhilirating to watch the boys win a game of football than to do any work whatever you feel must be done or to spend that time with the most interesting man or woman under the sun.

That night at the evening meal you will be able to talk the language of the young people and you will never be any closer to that boy of yours than when you can join in about the game that had been won or lost on an "if so-and-so."

I freely confess that I am afraid for my boy to play, for I am all mother. But when the time comes the first one to get to him, when needed will be mother, unless I faint by the way, which I may do. I do not want to be thought by him as a "poor sport," neither do I want to sow a little seed of yellow in him.

Now, can't we all fall in line and go more to the games?

If you go once, you will twice and soon you will be like the rest of us on the side-lines, running and yelling, having forgotten the forty or fifty years that lie behind. Forget the cost in money and time, and let's all be as loyal to our boys as other towns are to theirs.

Show the boys that we really are interested in their games and let those men know we are behind them every inch just so long as they lead our boys towards the goal of true Christian manhood, and incidentally toward Pineville's goal on Thanksgiving Day.

A MOTHER.

Cumberland River Has Bulk of Power

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 1.—The bulk of Kentucky's potential water power, except fo rthe Ohio, is located on Cumberland river and its tributaries, Dr. Willard Rouse Jillson, state geologist, reported today in conclusion of his studies of river systems.

"A dam 87 feet high located at the top of Cumberland falls will create a pool extending to Williamsburg and will be used primarily as a storage reservoir," he said. "At the fall, in themselves have a sheer drop of 68 feet at low water making a total head of 155 feet available at this point when the reservoir is full.

"A second dam about 155 feet high is to be constructed at the foot of Smith Shoals, two miles above Burnside, which will back water to the foot of Cumberland Falls.

"A third dam of about the same height is proposed for the South Fork of Cumberland river at a point two miles above its junction with the main stream.

"Preliminary plans call for the installation of machinery to develop 45,000 horsepower at Dam No. 1; 75,000 horsepower; at Dam No. 2; and 30,000 horsepower at Dam No. 3, making a total installed capacity of about 150,000 horsepower."

The principal tributaries of Cumberland river are Laurel, Rockcastle, Oboy, Stones, Harpeth and Red rivers, and South and Caney Forks.

The river basin is rich in coal and lumber, and the outlet for these and for other products of the basin is the river itself, Dr. Jillson found.

HARROGATE, Nov. 3. (Special to Daily News).—Smarting under three successive defeats, the L. M. U. Railsplitters came back strong today and defeated the Union College eleven 46-0, on the Middlesboro gridiron.

The Union lads were very out played and were on the defensive practically the whole time. Not once was the L. M. U. goal in danger. The first touchdown, made in the early part of the first quarter, was the result of a series of line plunges and end runs and was but the forerunner of two touchdowns in the second quarter, one in the third and three in the fourth. Twice L. M. U. failed to kick goal. The most of the large gains were thru right tackle and completed passes. The feature of the game was the broken field running of "Tex Turner of L. M. U. Bentley Gordon Nuptials Saturday Evening

Probably the most brilliant social event of the season was the wedding Saturday night of Miss Henrietta Mewburn Gordon of this city and Mr. Benjamin H. Bentley of Jefferson City, Tennessee. The ceremony was performed at St. Mary's Episcopal church at 8:30 p. m. in the presence of a large number of the young couple's friends. The Rev. Arthur R. Price, rector of the church, officiated.

The church was beautifully decorated in white, gold and green. A carpet of white was spread for the bride from the door to the altar and white ribbons, stretched on each side, formed an aisle way. White asters chrysanthemums and ferns banked the dais and a beautiful background for the altar was formed of white standards tied with gold mallne and white asters, with asters banked between.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. J. C. Richardson, at the organ, played a varied musical program. Then, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding March, the participants entered. First came the vested choir singing the processional as they marched up the aisle. From the choir room the rector, the bridegroom and his best man, Prof. Harold Idyltes of New York City, entered while, following the choir, came the ushers, John McKinnon, George Callison and Jim Adams of Mascot, Tennessee. Next came the three bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Gunn, Miss Margaret Davis and Miss Frances Fitzpatrick. They were dressed in rainbow shades of georgette with ostrich decorations and filmy mallne hats to mach and each carried pink roses. Then came the matron of honor, Mrs. Clarence Gordon of Wilkinsburg, Pa., dressed in old rose silk with mallne sat to mach and carrying dark pink roses. The tiny flower girl and ring bearer, Mary Baker and Dave Wick Victor, both dressed in white, came next dir ectly preceding the bride. Miss Gordon, ever conceded one of Middlesboro's fairest daughters, was never lovelier. She wore a white satin dress, simply made, decorated with white handmade roses and her long tulle veil was held in place by orange blossoms. An interesting item of her costume was the fact that she wore the pearls of her grandmother wore the pearls of her grandmother and lace that had ornamented the wedding dresses of both her great-grandmother and her great-great-grandmother. All three of these had borne the name of Henrietta Mewburn and they joined thus in the wedding of their namesake of the fifth generation. Following the ceremony during which Mrs. Richardson played softly Mr. Wowell's "To a Wild Rose" the party left the church while the choir sang Gounod's Recessional.

Mr. and Mrs. Bentley left on the 10:10 train for a short honeymoon in Louisville and other central points, after which they will go to make their home in Jefferson City, Tennessee, where Mr. Bentley is in charge of a lumber yard. The bride wore a beautiful going away dress of brick bengaline with hat to mach of the same shade.

Mrs. Bently is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Gordon and was born and spent most of her life in Middlesboro. She received her education at Mississippi College for Women and Lincoln Memorial University and is particularly talented in art. Mrs. Bentley's beauty and her charm of personality and character has made her a favorite in almost every circle in Middlesboro and she will be keenly missed in this city. Mr. Bentley is a graduate of Michigan Agricultural College at Lansing Mich.. He came to Lincoln Memorial University as head of their forestry department in 1921 and it was there he met his bride. Mr. Bentley was in Middlesboro, connected with the Bell County Lumber and Coal company for more than a year before he went to Jefferson City and he also has may admirers in this city.

Broad interest was felt in the marriage of Miss Henrietta Gordon of this city to Mr. B. H. Bentley of Jefferson City, Tenn., on November 1st. Mrs. Bentley is the very attractive and talented young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Gordon and a graduate of the Lincoln Memorial university at which place she met Mr. Bentley, who was director of the forestry department of the university, but is now manager of a large lumber enterprise in Jefferson City. Mr. Bentley is also graduate of the Michigan Agricultural college.

The wedding was solemnized in the St. Mary's Episcopal church at 8:30 November 1. It was one of the leading social events of the season. Miss Gordon's popularity extending throughout the section.—Courtesy of Knoxville Sentinel.

Dinner Friday Night For Bridal Party

Miss Frances Fitzpatrick entertained Friday night at her home on Dorchester Avenue with a buffet supper for the Bentley-Gordon wedding party and a few friends. A feature of the attractively decorated dining room was a china doll bride, elaborately dressed, which formed the centerpiece.

The guests included the following: Miss Henrietta Gordon, B. H. Bentley, Miss Margaret Gunn, Miss Margaret Davis, Miss Eula Greer, Miss Mildred Kerr, Mrs. B. K. Bentley of Marshall, Mich., Mrs. Clarence Gordon of Wilkinsburg, Pa., Mrs. Charles Purnell of Lynch, and Mrs. F. M. Gordon, Harold Idylles of New York City, Jim Adams of Mascot, Tenn., George Callison, John McKinnon, Thad Fitzpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Warren P. Rash and Capt. and Mrs. W. H. Davis.

Hallowe'en Is Observed With Dancing and Games

Hallowe'en spirits found their way to the home of Laurence Rice Friday night to celebrate All Saints day with a masquerade party. The hous was artistically decorated in the Hallowe'en colors of orange and black. Dancing and games afforded the evening's entertainment.

Refreshments in keeping with the occasion were served at the close of the evening.

"JIM"

Everybody is for GOOD ROADS.
Never mind the DETRIMENTALS.
They're against everything.
Unless they originate it.
That makes a difference.
All the difference in the world.
We rise to salute one Kentuckian in particular
COL. JIM MARET,
"THE BOONE WAY MAN."
With a battered typewriter he carved the way.
He's still on the job.

Dr. play Hoe I ask-

Well, a Fresno (Calif.) woman bought the fall and will live in for electric lights to be used in illuminating the play ground. Many business men do not have an opportunity to play during the day and if the play ground was lighted this would give the men a chance to indulge in the sport. This committee are to furnish the wire, the switches and prepare for the lighting of the ground. All the city is required to do is to furnish the power. A meter will be installed and the lights run upon it. The commission decided to try out the plan. If it works out well the system will be permanently installed.

Radio On Repair Trucks Is Success

DETROIT, Nov. 3.—(AP).—After five months of use, radio as a means of directing the movement of the Detroit Street Railway department's emergency repair trucks is proving itself feasible and has saved the city more than $3,000 a month, according to H. M. Gould, assistant general manager of the municipally owned traction system.

Before the installation of receiving sets on the trucks, the trucks would make temporary repairs upon call, then return to their stations, to await further calls. A construction truck followed as soon as possible to make permanent repairs. Later an attempt to have the emergency trucks complete the job and telephone for further orders proved impracticable.

Last May, after two years occupied in designing and installing special receiving equipment on trucks and gaining government permission to have the police station, KOP, forward orders to the trucks the radio method of transmission of orders was inaugurated. At first the crews were summoned to the nearest telephone upon hearing strains of a certain piece of music. Later orders were transmitted direct.
